

THE WILD INSIDE BY JAMEY BRADBURY

On March 29, we met the writer Jamey Bradbury at meeting at Lyon. She spoke about her new book "The Wild Inside". The story is about Tracy Petrikoff, a teenager who lives in Alaska, by the woods away from the city. She lives with her parents and her brother but she would like to be independant. She 's a strange girl with a gift which is given to her by her mother. She drinks the blood of an animal and then she has animal-like instincts.

Jamey Bradbury started to write in her childhood (at 5 years old). As a child she would spend her days reading, she was inspired by Stephen King. At the beginning, Jamey wanted to write horror stories like vampirism but she also wanted to talk about education, and finally she mixed the both subjects.

This novel is full of mystery, and her next book is also weird. It will talk about a woman who lives also in Alaska in a big house whith many doors: in the walls, on the ceilling and on the floors. These doors brings her to her past.

